See the Good and Share That With Your Grandchildren Written By Camellia Varnado, Author and Podcaster

As grandparents, our perspectives are often shaped by years of experiences, including the good and challenging. Our life experiences give us a unique ability to see the good in various situations and share that outlook with our grandchildren and the wider community. Here are some practical ways to cultivate and cause a ripple perspective:

Cultivating a Positive Vantage Point:

- Daily Gratitude: Start each day by thanking God for specific blessings. Get a gratitude journal and encourage your grandchildren to do the same (or gift one to them). Share your entries with them and listen to theirs, fostering an atmosphere of thankfulness. This creates an atmosphere of praise to God.
- Mindful Moments: Take time to notice and appreciate small blessings—like a beautiful sunrise, a kind word, or a moment of laughter. Point these out to your grandchildren to teach them to find joy in the simple things. Laughter is good medicine for our souls.
- Reflect on God's Faithfulness: Regularly reflect on and share stories of God's faithfulness throughout your life. Whether it is answered prayers, unexpected blessings, or times of growth during hardships, these stories can inspire your grandchildren to trust in God's goodness. It is a reminder that the same God is faithful to them throughout their life.

Sharing the Good with Your Grandchildren

- Storytelling: Use your personal stories to illustrate how God has been at work in your life. Share times when you saw His hand guiding you through difficulties and celebrate His blessings with your grandchildren. Take advantage of those opportunities to share stories from your life that show the goodness of God! Talk about the little miracles in your life – a healed illness, a job opportunity that came through, a mended relationship. Let your grandchildren see how God is constantly working in the world, even in the seemingly ordinary!
- Celebrate Achievements: Recognize and celebrate your grandchildren's achievements and milestones. Highlight their strengths and encourage them to see their own potential and the good in their efforts. Be intentional about being their biggest fan in life!
- Model Positivity: Be a role model of a positive attitude. Let your grandchildren see you manage challenges with grace and faith. Your actions and words will teach them how to approach life's difficulties with a hopeful heart. It is always in our actions not only our words!
- Start a tradition: of family devotions, reading scripture together and discussing its meaning. Even a short daily devotion can plant seeds of faith that will grow with your grandchildren. Seeing the good is also about overcoming challenges. Life is not always good BUT remains good. Leaning on our faith during these challenges shows our foundation to see the good in challenging times. Praying for wisdom and strength is part one. Our subsequent trusting and depending on God demonstrates our reliance on God to our grandchildren.

Book Review

His Grace is Enough: How God Makes It Right When We've Got it Wrong is an illustrated, rhyming book that helps explain to children the wonderful message of God's grace—that Jesus offers forgiveness and allows us to move on from our mistakes. The lyrical rhymes remind them that Jesus is the person to run to when they mess up:

“My child, here’s the truth
From God, you can’t hide
He sees what you’ve done
He knows what’s inside
But please don’t despair
There’s good news, I say!
Whatever you do
God’s grace makes a way
Yes, His grace is enough
It’s so big and so free
His grace is enough
Both for you and for me.

Grand Lexicon

Grandcation – a brief getaway with the grands marked by loud squeals, early risers, a meltdown or three, and endless snacks. Synonym—“wonderful chaos.” (Note: A day or two of recovery after you return home may be necessary before resuming normal activities!)

“I love watching you play”--a favorite first response after watching a grand’s ballgame. No matter the outcome of the game or how well or not-so-well your grand played. These words will be a treasure!
